Question from Alan West

In relation to the concrete bollards at Luna Park and the Palais theatre area, Mr West asked is the City of Port Phillip still renting the bollards? If so, could accurate figures be provided along with the name of the renter?

Response

In answer to your query, the concrete bollards at Luna Park and the Palais theatre are being rented through Australian Bollards. The rental cost for the bollards is approximately $90,000 per annum.

Council has engaged in detailed planning for long-term public space security improvements and it is anticipated that once the current lease expires, construction works will commence at these sites.
