Julie Mundy is an international development practitioner of more than 20 years standing – playing a key leadership role (as founding CEO) in a global women’s health social enterprise throughout the Asia Pacific, and in Africa.

As Regional Director, Julie’s role involved extensive internal partnership brokering work on large scale and complex cross-sector partnerships, during which time Julie became an Accredited Partnership Broker and Lead Trainer. Julie now works as an independent partnerships specialist with organisations including bilateral donors, national governments, private sector organisations, international research institutions, intergovernmental organisations and INGOs throughout Africa, Asia, Europe, Canada and Australia. In addition, she holds a key global leadership role with the Partnership Brokers Association, which is transforming the way organisations work together to solve complex social development problems around the world.

Additionally, Julie is a highly regarded management advisor, partnerships trainer and coach/mentor. An Australian Leadership Award winner, Julie is passionate about both the potential and reality of diverse groups of stakeholders working together to ‘do business differently’ and achieve real, sustainable change.

Leigh Harry has had a successful career in the public and private sectors in a range of senior management, Chief Executive and Chairman/President roles.

He is currently the principal of Leigh Harry Advisory Pty. Ltd. undertaking a range of consultancy roles.

Until August 2016 he was the Director Tourism Projects, Department of Economic Development, Jobs, Transport and Resources, Victorian Government.

Immediately prior to this he was Chief Executive of Tourism Victoria responsible for the Victorian Government’s leadership of the tourism industry in the State.

Tourism is a critical growth industry for Victoria and incorporates not only leisure tourism but also major sporting and cultural events and business conventions and exhibitions.

In all of Leigh’s roles he has involved himself not only in the specific organisation for which he was responsible but also in strategic engagements with industry bodies and related organisations. He has also contributed to the community in a variety of ways including through his previous involvement as a member and at board level in Rotary and he currently undertakes a range of volunteer responsibilities in the local community.
